RAPE AND WARFARE:
THE CASE OF FORT
JACKSON AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR

March 13 • 5:00 p.m.
Livak Ballroom • Davis Center

Feimster's academic focus is racial and sexual violence. Currently, she is completing a project on rape during the American Civil War. Her book, Southern Horrors: Women and the Politics of Rape and Lynching, focuses on two women journalists, Ida B. Wells, who campaigned against lynching, and Rebecca Latimer Felton, who urged white men to prove their manhood by lynching black men accused of raping white women.

Co-sponsored by the Critical Race and Ethnic Studies and Gender, Sexuality and Women's Studies Programs.

Thanks to the Critical Race and Ethnic Studies (CRES) Program, Gender, Sexuality, Women's Studies (GSWS) Program, the Office of the President, the Office of the Provost, the Office of the Vice President for Human Resources, Diversity, and Multicultural Affairs, and the Departments of Sociology, History, English, Religion, and Philosophy.
