

WEBINAR by the NCORE National Forum on Issues of Race and Ethnicity in American Higher Education

Introduction to Social Justice Models of Disability

Wednesday, October 31st | 4:00 - 5:30 p.m.
Allen House, 104 French Family Classroom

Presenter: Julie Alexander, access consultant at Purdue University

UVM Classroom Facilitator: Amber Fulcher, ADA coordinator

Overall Objective: Social justice models of disabilities define a disability as the result of the interaction between a person with an impairment and an environment that creates a barrier for that individual. Social justice models differ from medical models in that it places more emphasis on social factors and environmental design. This session will highlight societal attitudes towards people with disabilities through a discussion on media representation, messaging, microaggressions and explore how higher education institutions can be more inclusive to people with disabilities.

Target Audience: All staff and faculty

Level of Instruction: Intermediate
